WITH SINGLE-SCREEN CINEMAS ON THE WANE

PVR Bets on Affordable Multiplexes to Expand in Underserved Markets

Co targets 1,000 new screens in 5 years, identities 300 smaller cities to step up play

Javed Farooqui

Mumbai: The structural decline of India's single-screen cinemas is creating a fresh growth opportunity for multiplex operators, with PVR INOX betting on smaller, affordable multiplexes to expand into underserved markets, managing director Ajay Bilgi said. The country's largest multiplex operator plans to add at least 1,000 screens over next five years, focusing on franchisee-owned, company-operated (FOCO) and other asset-light models, with developers funding a significant share of project costs.

The opportunity is significant. About 16,350 of India's 19,000 pin codes still have no cinema screens, leaving vast parts of the country underserved despite rising consumption, according to EY's The Story of Film Exhibition in India.

India had 10,033 cinema screens at the end of 2025, only marginally more than six years earlier. Meanwhile, screen density declined from 7.6 screens per million people in 2018 to 6.6 in 2024, while nearly 1,000 single-screen theatres shut during the period, underscoring the structural challenges facing the traditional exhibition model.

"I started with a single-screen myself, and the reason I moved into multiplexes was that it became very difficult to fill a 1,083-seat cinema throughout the year. I used to struggle to achieve optimum occupancy across all 52 weeks because you don't get 52 films that can fill the cinema to the threshold where you make money," Bilgi told ET. Unlike a traditional single-screen theatre that depends on a single film to drive admissions, a three- or four-screen multiplex can programme multiple films simultaneously, improving utilisation while giving audiences greater choice, he said.

The economics are increasingly prompting single-screen owners to convert their properties into multiplexes. PVR INOX is itself converting Mymoon, a prominent single-screen cinema in Kochi, into a five-screen multiplex in partnership with Lulu Group.

"One compelling reason many single-screen theatres are converting into multiplexes is that the business becomes much more viable with four or five screens. Instead of showing just one film, we can screen five, six, seven or even 10 movies a day. Consumers benefit because they get a wider choice under one roof. In contrast, producers benefit as more films can be showcased simultaneously," he said.

The company has identified around 300 smaller cities, including Jabalpur, Muzaffarpur, Barrackpore and Rampur, for its affordable multiplex format.

Maha Govt Minister Pushes for Legal Action Against Builders Delaying MHADA Homes

FIRs alone insufficient; stricter legal action could help unlock 1,000 homes for allotment, says Mangal Prabhat Lodha

Our Bureau

Mumbai: A Maharashtra government minister has directed officials to initiate stringent legal action against developers who fail to hand over homes reserved for the Maharashtra Housing and Area Development Authority's (MHADA) under statutory provisions.

Merely registering FIRs against errant developers is not enough, and officials should pursue stricter legal action against them, said Mangal Prabhat Lodha, skill development, employment, entrepreneurship and innovation and Mumbai Suburban co-guardian minister.

"If necessary, send them to jail. Strict action against a few violators will act as led on citizen advisory committees constituted in municipal wards. The committees, comprising local public representatives, housing experts, architects, representatives of non-governmental organisations, and other stakeholders, are to strengthen engagement between citizens and the housing authority and helping resolve local issues.

The directions came from MHADA's letter to 2,640 homes. According to Pankaj Bhoir, minister of state for housing, the lottery received 75,127 applications, translating into an average of 28.54 applications per home, reflecting continued demand for affordable housing.

MHADA CEO Sanjeev Jaiswal said the Mumbai Board lottery was conducted in line with the government's decision to hold at least one lottery every year.

He said MHADA's regional boards had conducted nearly 25 lotteries over the last three years, making around 50,000 homes available to citizens.

According to Jaiswal, the government has set a target of constructing 30 lakh homes in the Mumbai Metropolitan Region under the Growth Hub initiative.
